

TWO YOUTHFUL LOOTERS RETURNED TO COUNTY SEAT

800-Mile Search Leads Doylestown Police Chief To South Carolina

TRIP BY AUTOMOBILE

Await Hearing Upon Charges of Thefts at County Seat

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 1.—After an 800-mile search that led him to a Negro fair in Columbia, S. C., Chief of Police James Welsh yesterday returned to Doylestown with two members of a trio of youthful burglars who are charged with robbing a large number of Doylestown homes and business places during the last year and getting away with money and loot valued at $2,500.

The third member of the trio was arrested last week in Doylestown in possession of a stolen automobile and is now in the county prison awaiting the action of the grand jury.

Albert E. Harper, 20, a professional boxer, who last winter performed in Doylestown at amateur bouts, and James Clifton Hudson, 21, who has been playing the "half man and half woman" act in side shows of the various county fairs through the southern circuit, are the two who Chief Police Welsh arrested.

Both are in the county prison awaiting a hearing before Justice W. Carl Hobensack. They are charged, together with Leroy Trauger, of Doylestown, the third member of the trio, with felonious entry, larceny, burglary and receiving stolen goods.

Hudson and Harper were captured by a husky Columbia, S. C., officer, who plunged into their tent on the fair grounds and brought them out together and turned them over to Chief Welsh, whose thorough and complete search of three days through North and South Carolina was successful.

Members of the trio are charged with robbing "Aldie," the home of William R. Mercer, the home of Chas. Leibig, the Court street American Store, Gehman's store on Court street, the Rexall Drug Store, Murray's Cut Rate Store, Hissand's office on Hamilton street, and several others.

Chief Welsh traveled close to 1500 miles by automobile on the round trip to make the arrest. He traced the men from fair to fair until a final "tip" led him to the Negro fair at Columbia, S. C.

Both Hudson and Harper were surprised when the Columbia officer grabbed them at the neck, jerked them out of their tent and turned them over to Chief Welsh.

"Lowdy," said Harper, who is a first cousin of Hudson. Both of the youths live in Rocky Mount, N. C., and have been playing the fairs with different acts for some months. They were in Doylestown during fair week this year. Hudson is married.

Records show that Harper, who was arrested in Doylestown earlier in the year for larceny but who was allowed to get away, has other criminal records and a dishonorable discharge from the United States Navy.

While in Doylestown early this year Harper represented himself as a "former amateur boxing champion of North Carolina." Later he was accused of stealing in the locker room at the Sixth Regiment Armory. He appeared in amateur bouts here and was considered the best boxer in Doylestown in his class.

Neither Harper or Hudson have admitted taking part in any of the robberies with which they are charged, but Chief Welsh has been collecting evidence for some weeks that will practically convict all members of the trio, it is believed.

The trip home with the two prisoners was also made by automobile. Hudson and Harper were placed in city jails over night.

During the search for Hudson and Harper, Chief Welsh made inquiry at the police department at Rocky Mount, N. C., home of the two youths.

"I certainly would like to get my hands on both of them," was the first statement made by the police sergeant after he had been informed by Chief Welsh that he was looking for Hudson and Harper.

Both Hudson and Harper are charged with committing the robbery at the home of Charles Leibig. At the other Doylestown places, Harper and Trauger are charged with committing the offenses.

STRANGE EPITAPH IS FOUND ON TOMBSTONE

Large Stone Slab with Peculiar Inscription Lies Flat On Ground

HAS HISTORICAL VALUE

BRISTOL, Nov. 1.—In center of the St. James's Cemetery, located on the western side of that edifice, is found a tomb-stone with a most peculiar and lengthy epitaph. The stone, a large slab, lies flat upon the ground, and attracts the interest of many.

The epitaph is:
Here rest the remains of
MR. JOHN HENRY

"Who was summoned to his audit, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, on the 16th day of October, 1794, in the 48th year of his age."

"Fortitude in every trying situation of life; the most exemplary patience under a torturing disease with which, for more than twenty years, he had been afflicted; if singleness of heart and benevolence of disposition, the most affectionate attention to the welfare and happiness of his family and all who looked up to him for assistance and protection, joined to a perfect faith in Divine revelation, can give hope of a blissful eternity, we may with confidence turn from the mouldering mansion where his body slumbers, and seek him in those glorious regions, where the wicked cease from troubling and where tears shall be wiped from every eye."

John Henry was born in Dublin in 1746. His debut as an actor was made in London, apparently in 1762, and on October 6, 1767, at Philadelphia, he first appeared before an American audience. He was soon recognized as one of the best actors yet seen in the colonies. During the Revolution Henry acted for a time at Drury Lane Theatre, London, but he was among the first players to return to America after the war. In 1785, he entered into partnership with Lewis Hallam in the management of the Old American Company, the leading theatrical organization of the country. In 1792, he withdrew from the partnership because of hostility within the company, and died in October of that year.

Many Pranks Played And Much Mischief is Done

Hallowe'en was celebrated in an informal way last night by residents here. There were numerous parties and masqueraders paraded about the streets garbed in all sorts of costumes.

There were the usual pranks played about town and in several instances these were carried to extremes and went so far as to damage property.

Gates were torn loose from fences and in some cases entire fences were torn down.

Danger lanterns set out by the Borough were either stolen or smashed to pieces and there was rowdiness in general.

Hundred Masqueraders Attend Elks' Ball, Here

About a hundred attended the Hallowe'en ball given last night by Bristol Lodge of Elks. The gathering was comprised of members of the Elks, their wives and friends.

The decorations were exceedingly attractive and the Elks' Home presented a most inviting appearance.

Many original and fancy costumes were seen and the judges, Chauncey E. Stoneback, Sr., Maurice Updike and Elwood Gosline had a real task to select the prize winners.

Prizes were awarded to the following:

Most original, Mrs. William Pearson; comic, Mrs. Clifford Muffett, Miss Mary Burns and partner.

The orchestra led by Mike Fisch was much enjoyed and kept all of the dancers stepping at a lively rate.

SERVICE OPPORTUNITY GIVEN PEOPLE OF STATE

"Join—or Renew Your Membership" Will Be Red Cross Slogan

DRIVE STARTS NOV. 11

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—A record of unceasing service—greater even in peace than in war—will be brought before the people of America this month when the Red Cross gives all an opportunity to share in its humanitarian work by extending the privilege of membership to every man, woman and child in the country.

"Join—or renew your membership!"

When the thirteenth annual Roll Call opens on Armistice Day, November 11th, more than 15,000 volunteers will visit every section of Philadelphia and the four adjoining Counties of Bucks, Delaware, Montgomery and Chester—the territory of the South-eastern Pennsylvania Chapter—with the only plea made by the Red Cross for itself alone. Not one penny contributed in time of disaster is used for administration—all contributions are spent for relief.

Red Cross work goes on unremittingly twenty-four hours a day and every day in the year, sustained by dues from its members. And this year there is particular urgency in the Red Cross appeal for a larger membership in 1930.

The constant calls for disaster relief since the war have reduced the reserve fund of the American National Red Cross from fifty-two millions to sixteen millions of dollars. Last year the annual budget of the Red Cross was a million dollars in excess of the amount received from membership dues and the deficit had to be met from the reserve fund.

Unless this is changed by an increased membership of over one and one-half million, the reserves set aside for work among ex-service men and other activities will be exhausted in a few years.

Since the war, the surplus created at that time has been drawn upon by the Red Cross to extent of more than $25,000,000 above all receipts. During the past seven years the organization has spent more than six and one-half millions for disaster relief over and above contributions received for the purpose. In other words Red Cross general expenditures have exceeded the general revenue by more than $10,000,000 on an average yearly loss of $1,447,000.

In other words we are not supporting our Red Cross!

Of the population of two and one-half million persons in Philadelphia and the four adjoining counties, two million are not members of the Red Cross. Ninety-four persons out of every hundred in the territory of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter do not help the organization with its great program of mercy and protection.

All who join have equal rights, and for those who can afford it are contributing memberships at $5 a year; supporting memberships at $10 a year; and sustaining memberships are $25 a year. To bring the Red Cross within reach of all is the annual membership at one dollar per year. From memberships dues of every class, fifty cents is deducted and sent to Washington to support the National organization.

The remaining fifty cents makes possible the year-round labor of the Red Cross in your own community—Red Cross nurses in programs of public health; Red Cross dietitians instructing the children of the rural communities and schools in the lesson of proper nutrition; Red Cross life-savers and first aid instructors teaching conservation of human life everywhere; Red Cross teachers who through Home Hygiene courses instruct in the care of the sick, and Red Cross workers who, eleven years after

PARTIES OF HALLOWE'EN SEASON KEEP BRISTOL FOLKS BUSY; GALA AFFAIRS ENJOYED BY BOTH OLD AND YOUNG THROUGHOUT THE BOROUGH

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Kline Are Hosts at Their Pond Street Residence—Cash Prizes Awarded at Knights of Columbus Dance—McCurry's Entertain

One of the most delightful parties of the Hallowe'en season was given by Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Kline at their residence, 1221 Pond street, last evening, to a number of their friends, who entered into the spirit of the occasion and attended masked in every conceivable kind of costume.

Mr. and Mrs. Kline mingled among their guests, representing an old fashioned lady and a Yama Yama girl. There were representations of Colonial lady, young men in full dress, Aunt Dinah, clowns, Jiggs and Maggie and many others.

Edward Wallace and James Turner were dressed alike, in white suits, aprons and caps, and each carried a large tray suspended from their shoulders with cigarettes and hot dogs for sale.

Prizes were awarded for comic and best dressed impersonations. The judges were the guests who were requested to write on paper their decision. Miss Hilda Pope as "Jiggs" won the comic, and Elwood Watt as a "Bristol Cadet" the best dressed.

After unmasking the guests still in costume, formed five tables of pinocchio and prizes were given to Mrs. Harry Arnold, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stetson, Mrs. James Turner, Walter Fagan, and Mr. Mathias. Refreshments in keeping with the season were served.

On arriving at the Kline residence, the guests were greeted by lighted skeleton heads on the front porch. The rooms were beautifully decorated in yellow and black crepe paper streamers, witches, black cats. Corn-stalks were placed on each side of the fire place, while in the center rested a large pumpkin with a lighted candle which showed the large face to perfection.

The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fagan, Mr. and Mrs. James Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Loechner, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Arnold, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Schmidt, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stetson, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Kline, Miss Hilda Pope, Mrs. Ida Percy, Mrs. Harry Pope, Miss Sallie Percy, Arthur Dungan, Elwood Watt and J. Mathias.

The Knights of Columbus dance held Wednesday evening in their home on Radcliffe street, was well attended, there being about eighty persons present. The rooms were attractively decorated with the Hallowe'en colors, orange and black, and corn husks, were placed in the corners of the room, while skeletons, black cats and other weird faces made their appearance at all corners and crevices.

All the guests did not mask, but those who did mask, were dressed in various costumes, making much merriment for everyone present. Prizes were awarded for some of the costumes. Misses Grace and Frances Blanche were awarded prize for fancy dress, Miss Mary McFadden and Edward McFadden, prizes for comic dress, and Cletus Hoffman, for the most original dress. The prizes awarded were all in cash.

McDonald's Collegians, the well known orchestra, furnished music for the dancing, which continued until a late hour. Refreshments were also enjoyed during the evening, and everybody had a good time.

The committee members in charge of the affair were: Edward McFadden, chairman; William Gallagher, Melvin Snyder, John Barrett, Frank Hurley, Frank Keating, Jack Ennis, William Ennis, William Harry, Cletus Hoffman.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. McCurry, of Venice avenue, Bristol Terrace, was the scene of a joyous masquerade party last evening, when their children, Robert, Maurice and Mary Margaret, entertained about forty of their friends.

The entire first floor was turned over to the guests. The porch, living room, dining room, den and breakfast room were elaborately decorated. Festoons of orange and black, were in every room, while in the corners and centers of the rooms were large moon faces, which were lighted. Witches, owls and black cats were also used and with autumn leaves, added to make the home speak of Hallowe'en.

The evening was spent in singing, dancing, music and playing games. Piano selections were offered by Roger Listorti and Margaret McCarthy. Mrs. McCurry was assisted in entertaining the guests by Mrs. Catherine Barrett and Mrs. Neal McFaine.

Among the guests were: Arabelle Barrett, Mary Barrett, Margaret McCarthy, Elva Roberts, Rita Barnfield, Rita McGee, Sue Huchison, Mildred Persell, Mary Jane Clark, Alice Keating, Mary Lynn, Elizabeth Mulligan, Margaret Robinson, Virginia McFaine, Joseph Britton, Pierce Barrett, John McCarthy, Robert Wright, John Dougherty, Tullio and Roger Listorti, John Monahan, Edward Keating, Maurice Mulligan, George Clark, Bernard Clark, Leonard Bassett, Alfred McFaine, William Lynn, Joseph Lynn, Thomas Barrett, James Blanche, Francis McFaine, Paul McFaine.

Miss Ruth Blanche, of Radcliffe street, entertained a few of her friends at her home on Wednesday evening at a Hallowe'en party.

The party was held in the basement which was attractively decorated in orange and black crepe paper streamers, draped from the four corners to the center of the room. The windows were also draped with the orange crepe paper to represent curtains, with the black tie-backs. A large lantern covered the light in the ceiling, lending a golden glow in the room. Sketches, witches, black cats and other weird faces also made their appearance.

A pleasant evening was spent playing various Hallowe'en games, and at a late hour, refreshments were served. Those present were: Margaret Collier, Ethel Snyder, Eleanor Black, Virginia Smith, Virginia McFaine, Grace Curry, Ruth Blanche, Leonard McGee, Leonard Dever, Jack Fitzgerald, Albert Blanche, Jimmie Rue and Edward McGinley.

Witches gathered, ghosts convened, and grotesque apparitions of every conceivable form made merry as the employees of the D. Landreth Seed Company enjoyed a most delightful Hallowe'en masquerade party on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. E. A. Smith, of Orchard avenue.

Beautiful decorations of black and orange enhanced the rooms and gave the typical Hallowe'en atmosphere and spirit to the guests. Many games were played and a happy and lively party prevailed. Those who received prizes for games were: Miss Frances Tamborella and Mrs. May Bauer, bird game; peanut game, Miss Florence Marden and Miss Mabel Conover. Everyone participated in the string game and received a prize at the end of her line.

Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Bryner for being the best dressed person; most original costume, to Mrs. Sarah Lake; for fancy dressed costume, Miss Pearl Corning and Mrs. Mildred Hardy, Mrs. Florida DeVoe, Miss Anna Morgan and Miss Esie Dietrich were awarded prizes for being the most comically dressed.

At a late hour a bountiful supper was served and appropriate favors were given to the guests. One of the most attractive features of the dining room decorations was a huge seventy-five pound pumpkin which graced the table.

These who enjoyed the pleasant affair were: Miss Alma Bennett, Mrs. May Bauer, Mrs. Sophie Gilbert, Mrs. Hiland, Mrs. Marion Troutman, Miss Caroline Marino, Miss Pearl Corning, Mrs. Mildred Hardy, Mrs. Bryner, Mrs. Sarah Lake, Mrs. Sarah Kelter, Mrs. Florida DeVoe, Miss Florence Marsden. BARN DESTROYED BY $15,000 FIRE NEAR RICHBORO

Is 36th Barn Fire to Occur In the County Since June 14th

AT THE CORNELL FARM

Season's Crops and Half The Farm Machinery Are Lost

RICHBORO, Nov. 1.—The 36th barn in Bucks County since June 14th and the third in this section during the past week to be destroyed by fire, was burned to the ground early last evening one mile west of here, entailing a loss estimated at $15,000.

The total loss due to barn fires in Bucks county since June 14th is estimated at $216,000.

The fire last night was at the farm of Cornell. A fine large barn was completely destroyed along with the season's crops and about half of the farm machinery.

Mr. Cornell sat in his home reading at about 8.30 when his attention was attracted by a reflection. He looked from the window and found that the barn was ablaze at the top of the structure.

Mr. Cornell ran to the barn and rescued his four horses, one cow, and succeeded in saving about half of his farm machinery. The blaze being in the top of the structure enabled the owner to get his live stock and some machinery out before the flames reached the lower portion of the building.

In addition to the barn there were several outbuildings and the house nearby. These were saved by firemen from Richboro, Southampton, and Ivyland. A large silo was consumed.

The crops consisted of 40 tons of hay, 20 tons of straw, wheat, corn, and other crops.

Early Morning Blaze At Elks' Home Damages Porches

Fire early this morning did considerable damage to the rear porches of the Elks Home, Radcliffe and Walnut streets. It is estimated by Chief McGee that the damage will reach $1,000.

It was about four o'clock this morning when police officer Spezzano while making his rounds discovered the blaze. He sent in an alarm and the Consolidated Department responded.

The flames originated in the center of the floor of the top porch to the rear of the home and burned through. The falling embers ignited the floor of the lower porch and this burned as well.

The centers of the floors of both porches will have to be replaced.

It is believed that the blaze was due to a short circuit in the electric wiring.

PLANE TALK

By HARRY A. SUTTON
Of the Technical Staff,
The Aviation Corporation (Written Expressly for International News Service)

1. How Elevator, Rudder and Aileron Work

An airplane in flight moves about three axis; vertical, horizontal and lateral. Its vertical or up-and-down movements are controlled by the elevator, its horizontal or left-and-right movements by the rudder and its lateral movements or balance by the ailerons.

Elevator, a horizontal fin, and rudder, a vertical fin, are in the tail. The ailerons are hinged, movable sections of the rear (tailing) edges of the wing tips. Their action is reciprocal; when the left is down, the right is automatically up and vice versa.

An upright handle (control stick) resembling an automobile transmission lever in its movement about a pivotal point, actuates elevator and aileron. A footbar controls the rudder. Stick and rudder bar are connected to their respective control surfaces by cables or rods.

Moved forward, the control stick depresses the elevator, raising the tail and lowering the nose. To ascend, the stick is pulled backward, raising the elevator, lowering the tail, elevating the nose. Turning to the right is achieved by pressing the rudder bar with the right foot, swinging the tail to the left and the nose to the right.

To tilt (bank) the machine to the right, the stick is moved in that direction, lowering the left and raising the right aileron and raising the left and depressing the right wing. To overcome the effect of centrifugal force, it is necessary to bank while turning. Thus, to turn left, left rudder and left aileron are used.

(The next article of Plane Talk will discuss airplane motors.)

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—(INS)—The former Presidential yacht Mayflower still is lying idle today in the Philadelphia Navy Yards minus a skipper. Some time ago the U. S. Navy Department advertised the vessel was for sale, but all bids were rejected yesterday. The craft will be re-advertised.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 1.—(INS)—When they were struck by a freight train at the Allport Mines crossing near here this morning, Charles Resetar, 20 and John Christoff, 21, both of Allport, were instantly killed. Members of the train crew were unable to account for the accident since it was said that no one saw the young men before they were struck. The badly mangled bodies were removed to a morgue pending a coroner's inquest.

Gunner Peppered With Shot Early Today at Gardenville

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 1.—The first accident of the gunning season occurred near here at seven o'clock this morning when Anthony Bilhardt, of 356 Wietar street, Germantown, was shot by a member of the party he was gunning with at Gardenville.

Bilhardt was wounded in the abdomen, thigh and right hand. Many of the pieces of shot were removed, but some were too deep to probe for. His condition is not considered serious at the Doylestown Emergency Hospital to which institution he was taken.

It was stated by members of the party that Bilhardt was peppered by shot from the gun of one of the group who could not see him owing to the dense fog.

BUSINESS HAS THE TRACK

When the highly inflated stock market broke President Hoover and many business leaders made haste to assure the public that business conditions are sound. They feared the psychological effect of the collapse if it were not made plain that there is no direct connection between business and speculation. The sudden fall in stock values emphasized once more the contrast that has existed for several years between the careful and orderly operations in trade and industry as a whole and the exaggerated expectations and frenzied activities of the speculative fraternity.

The worst that can be said now of industry is that there has been some slackening in basic lines. The pace of automobile output was too heavy even for the increase in home sales and the very large gain in foreign demand. The steel industry suffers principally from its loss of automobile business. In other branches of consumption good increases are noted.

Into the long-expanding bubble were going the surplus earnings of millions of men and women to the loss of local business and manufacturers in general. Now that the bubble is no more these earnings may be diverted into channels that will more directly and immediately benefit the business that talks in terms of wages and industrial and commercial growth.

Collapse of stock speculation should bring several other outstanding benefits. Among these are reduced credit danger, easier money, fewer unsound merger and chain promotions, and more attention by business men to business itself instead of to the tape.

IN COLLEGE: $50,000

One person in every 40, approximately, of the population of the United States between the ages of 16 and 20 is in a higher institution of learning. This estimate does not take account of those following extension or casual courses.

For the most part these $50,000 young men and women are not engaged in what is called "gainful employment," though they are not by any means unemployed. This fourth of eight are women—is taking himself or herself temporarily out of the economic life of the nation, except as a consumer, but with the expectation that the productivity of later years may be so augmented as to make up for this period of preparation. These academic years are the years of "the fallow." But they are not idle years, at least not for all students.

Statistics indicate that the country has passed the peak in college and university enrollment. For 10 years there has been a rapid and steady increase; now the United States seems to be facing a decline in quantity education. Whichever way the pendulum swings there are advantages and disadvantages. Crowded institutions of higher learning mean not higher standards but more undergraduates who get by and that is all they get in college. Only a certain percentage of each generation is born for the duties in life for which higher education trains.

The woman who married a man to reform him finds solace in the thought that even legislation cannot do it.

LAST HIRED, FIRST FIRED

There's no penalty for being sober. No matter where aspiration may lead, or how high or humble the goal, there is no honorable purpose of mankind nor worthy distinction of honor to which old Hank Hootch or giddy Tim Topsy holds the key. In the strenuous race of life the boozier is the loser.

Probably no young attorney was ever refused an important case because he was sober; no budding stenographer or saleswoman ever got the "blue envelope" for lack of booze on the breath or a staggering step; no young doctor ever missed a call because he had neglected to get "half shot"; no young man was ever refused credit by the banker, the baker or butcher because he was too often sober; there is no record of a football coach kicking a student off the first team because he was not chummy enough with John G. Barclay.

Experience teaches that the chief danger from drink is drinking it.—W. G. Calderwood.

What History Each Musty File Portrays—

NOW and then you have seen displayed in the window of your Neighborhood Druggist a number of prescription files, and have passed them by without a thought of "what a world of history each musty file portrays." Inserted carefully in those books are the prescription formulas which the local physicians have written and the druggist has dispensed—often for a generation or more back.

In a language eloquent to those who can interpret their somewhat hieroglyphic characters, these old prescription files tell of many a crisis in the lives of the people of the community, from childhood to old age, and they often bear silent testimony to devoted service in the hour of emergency by physician and pharmacist.

While the Prescription Druggist must often combine the duties of merchant and professional man in order to maintain his pharmacy, his chief pride is in the work he does back of his prescription counter, surrounded by medicinal agents gathered from all quarters of the globe to combat disease and promote the health of mankind.

This novel is based on the Warner Bros. & Vitaphone Natural Color Picture. Adapted from Avery Hopwood's play, "The Gold Diggers."

SYNOPSIS
Violet, a chorus girl, and her fiance, Wally, enlist the aid of Jerry, understudy to the star, in getting the consent of Wally's uncle to their marriage. Jerry allows Uncle Steve to mistake her for Violet, and assumes the role of a scheming woman so that he will be happy to let someone else marry his nephew, Jim Blake, Steve's lawyer, suggests that they take Jerry out to get acquainted before making a final decision, and Jerry's friend, Mabel, comes along. The gold-digging starts, and is brought to a climax by a party for Jerry which Steve is to pay for. Most of the evening has passed, and Jerry has been unable to shock Steve. She and Wally are watching him trying to get away from Topsy.

"You know, men always want so much," she complained. "I'll bet the girls are crazy about you."
It was at this point that Lee began to make visible efforts to escape her. He wanted a drink, but she went right along with him to the dining room. Then he wanted to sit down to rest, and she was at his side, scolding herself for having tired him out.
"What type of girls do you like, Mr. Lee?" she insisted on knowing.
Oh, as long as they were charming and fairly pretty, they were all nice as far as he was concerned, he answered as non-committally as possible.

That was splendid. She despised men who went after the beautiful and dumb ones, and they were dumb usually, weren't they, Mr. Lee? He tried to think of other things as she talked on, and managed very well just by answering with a spasmodic "yes" or "no."

"Kiss me, Toreador."

At last she decided that he must go into the kitchen with her where she would make him a special kind of highball such as he had never had before.

"You go ahead—I don't like kitchens. I'll be in the living room," he replied decisively, getting up and going in that direction.

"How can you run after Jerry when a hot dish like me is giving you a tumble?" she asked, following him to the entrance.

"I'm not running after anybody, Topsy. You go and make that nice highball that you were just talking about."

When he had finally rid himself of her, he started towards Wally and Jerry, who having seen him coming, began their act for his benefit.

"Wally, darling," Jerry said out loud, wrapping her shawl about her shoulders, "I'm not really wicked—just Spanish and dangerous."

It was a signal for Wally to kiss her impulsively on the mouth, and for both of them to act surprised when they discovered Lee standing next to them. Jerry arose quickly, and greeted Uncle Steve.

"Ah, Senior Lee, eat oes a great pleasure to Carmen for to see you."

She had a scene in the show that started just that way, and Jerry decided to give Uncle Steve a performance. She was willing to try anything once. Walking around him seductively, she sang to him:

"La Espanol Hoboken"
Is Spanish as she should be spoken.

It means that my poor heart is broken.
Oh me, oh my, Si, si—
Oh, I was a maid young and silly

When I met this Spanish hill-billy.
He kissed me and that spilled the chill,
Yes, that spilled the beans for me.

By the time she went into the chorus, Uncle Steve was tapping his foot to the rhythm of the music.

"'Twas the poison kiss of that Spaniard
That gave me a kick in the pants—
The poison kiss of that Spaniard
I met at a Rotary dance,—
His love was as placid as car-bolic acid."

"Poor little darling," Mabel exclaimed, putting her arms around Blake's neck and giving him a peck on the chin. "I won't leave you any more tonight. Mabel will stay with her sweetie!"

I didn't know where I was at—
But the Spaniard whose kiss was like poison
Deceived me by leaving me flat—THE RAT.
Between the chorus and the second verse, Jerry did a fantastic dance, moving close to Lee whenever she could look flirtatiously into his face, and sweeping his head with her shawl.
"Twas the poison kiss of that Spaniard," she went on "That made me faw down and go boom.
The poison kiss of that Spaniard
Whose picture hangs up in my room.
He spoke of his castles, his servants, and vassals,
Oh, Gaudy, but I must have been dumb,
'Cause this Spaniard ain't even a Spaniard,
Peducah is where he is from, THE BUM."

"He was a gay Don Joo-Annie. The way he could love was uncanny."
He certainly did get my "nanny."

This guy who came from Spain,
The' his lips were warm and delicious,
The after-effects were too vicious:
Like some deadly poison per-nicious.

His kisses gave me ptomaine.
Again she danced around Lee—this time, particularly for him, making it so obvious that even the guests who had gathered around her noticed it.

"Aw, leave the fellow alone," someone said. But Jerry kept on until the end, finishing her number with:

"Kiss me, my Toreador!"
Jerry had not intended to have it end like this, but while she was dancing, she was watching Steve's face, and she could see that he was enjoying it all thoroughly. She would have to do better if she still wanted to shock him. She wondered if he would go as far as a kiss. She held up her face to his, and suddenly she felt his arms around her and his lips against hers—for long sweet seconds. Jerry hated to admit even to herself how sweet those moments were—with his arms around her. When he had released her, she made a quick effort to look composed.

"Gee, Uncle Steve," she told him, "your technique is perfect."

Lee straightened his shoulders without the slightest embarrassment.

"Not so bad, considering that I'm still in the kindergarten class."

Jerry gave him a condescending pat on the shoulder and turned to Wally, throwing herself into his arms, and holding her mouth up to his. Wally understood, and kissed her.

"There," she said, "that's to keep you from being jealous, my own little sugar plum."

She kissed him once more with great gusto, and blowing Uncle Steve a kiss, she took Wally by the hand and began pulling him out of the room.

"Come on, baby, let's go down to the stable and look over the horses." They walked out with their arms around each other and their heads together.

"What do you think?" whispered Jerry.

"Nothing—only that Uncle Steve has gone nuts about you."

"I thought this was sure-fire."

"Nothing is with him any more. He's just gone daffy over you—and as far as we are concerned, we're completely out of it."

When they had disappeared from sight, Blake moved over to Uncle Steve, and looked him straight in the face for a few moments accusingly.

"A great sap you turned out to be!"

Steve, who had watched Jerry until he could see her no longer, still stared in the direction she had gone.

"You know, Jim," he said, as if he had not heard Blake's remark, "I can't help admiring Jerry. She's so refreshingly natural."

"So is a tornado!" Jim replied hoily.

"You just don't understand her, Jim. She has a sweet nature and she's a girl of good character."

"Maybe."

"Sweetie, sweetie!" called Mabel, as she came running towards the men.

"Who said tornado?" asked Lee suggestively, as he saw Blake writhe when he recognized Mabel's voice.

"Hello, Mabel," Lee greeted her. "Your boy friend was just telling me how lonesome he was without you."

"Poor little darling," Mabel exclaimed, putting her arms around Blake's neck and giving him a peck on the chin. "I won't leave you any more tonight. Mabel will stay with her sweetie!"

GOLD DIGGERS of BROADWAY

by EVE BERNSTEIN

Copyright, 1929, Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.

This novel is based on the Warner Bros. & Vitaphone Natural Color Picture. Adapted from Avery Hopwood's play, "The Gold Diggers."

SYNOPSIS

Violet, a chorus girl, and her fiancé, Wally, enlist the aid of Jerry, understudy to the star, in getting the consent of Wally's uncle to their marriage. Jerry allows Uncle Steve to mistake her for Violet, and assumes the role of a scheming woman so that he will be happy to let someone else marry Wally. Blake, Steve's lawyer, suggests that they take Jerry out to get acquainted before making a final decision, and Jerry's friend, Mabel, comes along. The gold-digging starts, and is brought to a climax by a party Jerry has planned which Steve is to pay for. Mabel has pursued Blake relentlessly and Steve is helping her along as a joke on Blake.

"He said he has enjoyed these two weeks with you so much," continued the heartless Uncle Steve, "that he would like to give you a little present, just to show his appreciation of your friendship."

Lee avoided looking at Blake, but he kne w without seeing him that he was ready to do him violence.

"Oh, sweetie, I can't let you do it," Mabel purred. "You've already been so generous. What is it? Surely—not a diamond necklace—don't you dare give me a diamond necklace!"

"I'll try to restrain myself," Blake replied weakly.

"Shall I guess what it is?"

"It won't be hard," Lee told her.

"Then I know what it is—a nice little automobile."

Lee burst out laughing and left Blake to his troubles.

"How about a few yachts?" Blake

"Don't you see that it would hurt your reputation if I gave you a car?"

asked. "You know, an automobile is such a cheap gift for you."

Mabel considered a while, and then shook her head.

"No, I always get seasick. But a nice car, not one of those great big foreign cars, but just a simple little Lincoln, would be just the thing. Something very chaste—perhaps in purple, with ducky green wheels. Of course, I'd need a chauffeur."

"Please wait a minute," Blake begged.

"If you don't want to give me a Lincoln, I'll take a Packard. They're good, too, and maybe I would learn to drive and do without a chauffeur. No, that wouldn't do either. I guess I'd need a chauffeur to drive me to the theatre and back. What do you think, sweetie?"

"I think you're running away with your imagination, just as Lee did."

"They always said I had a good imagination. I can imagine just the kind of a car I want—color and all. It won't take me long to pick one because you see I know what I want. I'll tell you what let's do. I'll be loads of fun if we drive down to Automobile Row and window-shop. If we see something nice we'll buy it in the morning."

"No, I'm sleepy and—"

All the misery he felt was revealed in his hollow, tired voice, which had suddenly become entirely devoid of individuality. There was a deadly ring to it that expressed despair and defeat.

Undaunted, Mabel pursued her quest.

"The fresh air will do you good. Anyhow we're tired of this party, aren't we, sweetie?"

Blake forced her to release his arm, and stood there like a solid stone wall that all her pushing and moving would not budge.

"I don't want to go window shopping," he declared. "I can't afford to give you a car. I can't even consider it, and I won't. Now let's forget windows and cars and talk of something else."

"Oh, sweetie, you know you can afford it. You know you can, you know you can," she sang in a monotone, dancing around him and pulling out his necktie. When her finger was finished she took him by the hand, once more and began pulling him towards the door, but again his great bulk refused to yield. He was trying desperately to think of something quickly before she disarmed him completely and got her way as usual.

"Now, wait a minute," he said after some consideration. "Don't you see how it would hurt your reputation if I gave you a car? I'm surprised at you for not having thought of that before."

Mabel became pensive and stopped trying to get him out.

"That's right. People would talk, wouldn't they?"

For the first time since he had become acquainted with Mabel, Jim Blake felt that he had gained the upper hand in an argument. He had certainly been a fool to have given her so much. It just showed how much a man could lose by being so inexperienced. Now here was a situation which could have made him five thousand dollars poorer, and by using a little ingenuity he was getting out of the difficulty beautifully. A man had to use his head in such emergencies, instead of choosing the path of least resistance.

"Of course," Blake replied, "a man doesn't give a girl automobiles unless they're engaged or married, or something."

Mabel leaned up against him coyly and to his horror Blake realized that this time he had been too smart. He had allowed something to slip by him which would take more than ordinary ingenuity to overcome. It was his darned conceit this time which got the better of him. So elated was he at the possibility of winning an argument, that he did not have the sense to wait until he was sure of his victory. He was not surprised, therefore, that his remark should have set Mabel's thoughts working in a different direction.

"Oh, sweetie," she whispered, "you're proposing."

"No I'm not," he insisted, and years of legal experience made him add: "There's nothing in writing. You haven't any witnesses."

"Sweetie proposed! Sweetie proposed!" she repeated in a sing-song. "He has proposed! He has proposed! He has proposed!" she added, clapping her hands and jumping up and down like a child who has just been given a new toy.

"Please be sensible, Mabel," he urged, trying to quiet her before some of the guests should discover what she was saying.

"I wonder if Rover would take to you," she said thoughtfully. "I could never marry a man Rover didn't like. But I know sister would take to you. You know, you've heard me talk about my sister."

"I forgot about your sister," came feebly from Blake.

"Don't you remember? We're twins, sweetie. Aren't you glad? If anything happens to me, you'll always have her. Won't that be nice?"

"I suppose so," Blake replied, seeing the futility of arguing with Mabel. As if in a trance, he let her take his arm and lead him toward the door.

"Where are you taking me?" he asked in his state of semi-consciousness.

"Window shopping, sweetie. We're going to look at automobiles."

As they were leaving the house, she kept singing in his ear:

"Window shopping—window shopping. We're going window shopping." And Blake was too tired and too discouraged to do anything about it.

Meanwhile, the party was still in full swing. Lee had danced with nearly every girl in the place, and now he was one of a group which surrounded Topsy and another girl who were dancing to music from a ukulele which one of the men was playing quite expertly. He had danced with Jerry until she was too exhausted to move, and now at this late hour he was wide awake and ready for more. While this little side entertainment was going on, Wally, Jerry and Violet sat in a corner of the room, discussing what each one thought to be now a hopeless situation. If Lee had taken the time to look over at them just then, he would have seen three dejected faces, looking at each other sadly, no longer attempting to hide their concern with smiles. But he was too engrossed in the fun and dancing to notice anything amiss. He was like a boy on his first party who cannot possibly get enough of a good time and is too inexperienced to know when to stop.

"Just look at him," Wally wailed. "My austere Uncle Steve—who objected to my marrying a chorus girl."

"You know, kids," said Jerry, "I have a hunch that Uncle Steve is on to me."

"What do you mean?" Violet asked.

"I mean that he knows what I'm after—that I'm playing a game with him."

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Wally.

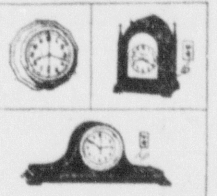

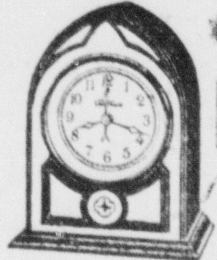

"Of course, he doesn't," agreed Violet.

A BUNGALOW BEAUTIFUL

By R. C. Hunter & Brothers, Architects, New York

There is an ever-increasing demand for better designed bungalows. This type of home has become very popular with a great many people who prefer all rooms on the one floor. Here is a good example of a well designed and practically-planned bungalow. The plan shows all that one could wish for in a modest home.

One enters the house through a most attractive doorway flanked with graceful benches on either side; passing through a vestibule you find the living room and dining room arranged end to end, giving a feeling of spaciousness.

The two bed rooms are connected from the living room by a hall.

The location and arrangement of the bath room is good.

There is a dining alcove located in the kitchen. A rear entry providing space for the ice box and a stair leading to the cellar.

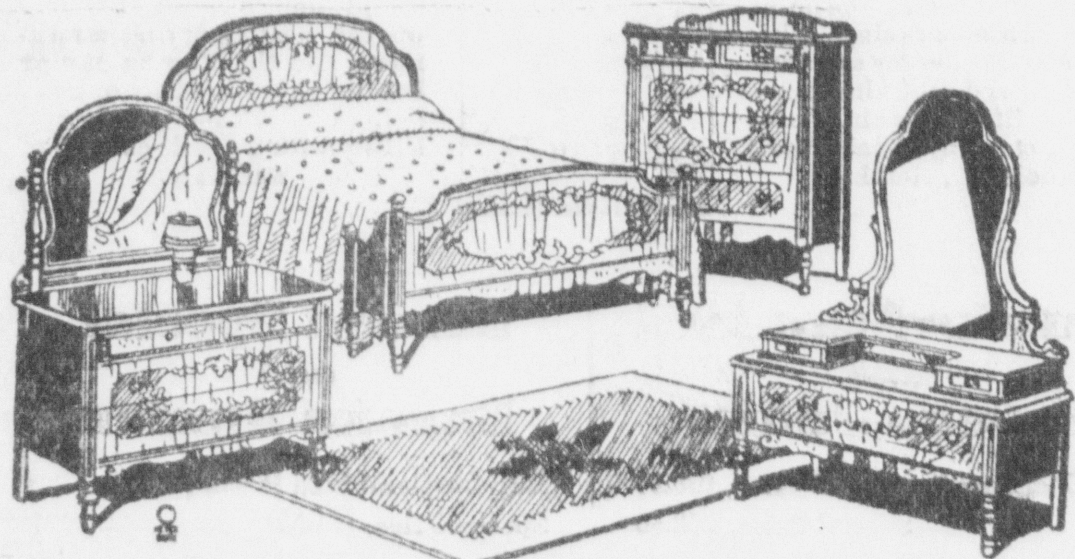

There are plenty of large closets conveniently arranged, a thing which always means so much to every housewife.

The latticed living room with shingles in variegated shades of browns and black. Side walls are siding painted cream color.

Complete working plans and specifications of this house may be obtained for a nominal sum from the Building Editor. Refer to House A-137.

HEALTHY, HAPPY, AFTER 4 WEEKS' USE OF KONJOLA

Young Lady Suffered Several Years With Stomach Trouble—New Medicine Gave Quick Relief

MISS ANNA MAY BARROW

"I was in a very bad condition, having suffered for several years with stomach trouble and constipation," said Miss Anna May Barrow, 27 Duke street, Lancaster, Penna. "I always had a bitter taste in my mouth. After meals I had horrible attacks of indigestion. Gas would form in my stomach and cause bloating and heartburn. My nights were always sleepless. "After taking Konjola for only four weeks my troubles were gone. How splendid it is to be able to eat anything I want without any ill effects! Gas pains, bloating, and heartburn trouble me no longer. I sleep soundly all through the night. Constipation has been banished. Konjola truly is a wonderful medicine." Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)

The Armistice carry on still for the World War veterans.

Under the Red Cross banner also is fostered the Junior Red Cross with its membership of seven million American school children.

Having given of its resources, the Red Cross now turns to the nation for the memberships which mean it may be eternally vigilant in guarding the welfare of America.

You are not asked to contribute—you are asked to join. The Red Cross is not a charity, it is organization chartered by Congress and founded on the fundamental law of humanity that helpless victims of disaster—whether from storm, flood, fire, pestilence or war are entitled to relief.

And as the only thing in the world that every civilized nation agrees upon, the Red Cross is the greatest silent agent for universal peace that exists in the world today.

THE HOME TOWNERS

BY JOHN LEARY PELTRET

FROM WARNER BROS. "ALL TALKING" VITAPHONE PICTURE
...BASED ON THE COMEDY BY GEORGE M. COHAN

SYNOPSIS—Arnold invites Bancroft, his chum, to be best man. Bancroft arrives, becomes suspicious of fiancée and family, creates row, engagement broken. Fiancée's brother returns wedding gift bracelet to Arnold, case empty when opened.

CHAPTER XI

IT becomes evident to Arnold that the only way to solve the mystery of the empty jewel case is to call the Calhouns. He gets Wally and Beth on the telephone. Wally says he will come right over. Arnold talks with Beth and urges her to come and bring her parents. Before they arrive Bancroft says he will go out and ask the butler some more questions about the matter.

THE Calhouns arrive at Arnold's. Wally has shown bracelet to Roberts at railroad station so knew it was in case. He asks where Bancroft is. Implies some one must have taken bracelet after butler gave case to Arnold. They all quarrel over the matter. Finally Bancroft returns, announcing he has sent the butler on an errand. This causes consternation all around.

IT is understood that Wally has left Arnold's firm. Then Calhoun learns Arnold is going to sell control of the bottle washing patent. This puts more fuel on the fire. Strangely enough all this time Beth seems inclined to take sides with Arnold, who assures her it is not the value of the trinket that he cares about, but that he loves her and wants the mystery cleared.

BANCROFT, meanwhile has been strangely silent, waiting for his chance to speak and clear up the affair. Mrs. Bancroft says that Roberts might have taken it, but Beth assures her that Roberts has an income from a twenty million dollar trust fund and that she turned down his offer of marriage because when she met Arnold she knew he was the one man for her.

TULLYTOWN SOCIAL

Tonight is the time for the Hallowe'en social in the Tullytown Christian Church community building. Waffles, cakes and pies will be offered for sale, and refreshments will be served.

Surprise Party Tendered
Mrs. William E. De Groot

Miss Anna Mae DeGroot, of 341 Jefferson avenue, tendered her mother a surprise party on Wednesday evening. The guests appeared masked and a lot of merriment ensued while Mrs. DeGroot guessed who her unexpected callers might be.

The invitation list included: Mrs. Harriet Minster, Mrs. Charles Williamson, Mrs. Owen Evans, Mrs. H. R. Shipp, Miss Ida Bruden, Mrs. L. J. Bevan, Mrs. William Carver, Mrs. S. W. Black, Mrs. Edward Renk, Miss Sara Silbert, Miss M. A. Wilkinson, Miss Nora Jones, Mrs. J. V. O'Donnell.

Mrs. Warren Armstrong, Mrs. Ellis E. Ratcliffe, Mrs. James Ridge, Mrs. J. Stewart Woodruff, Mrs. John Downs, Mrs. Mary L. Gilkeson and Mrs. William E. DeGroot, Jr.

Progressive "500" was played and favors were given Mrs. J. Stewart Woodruff, Mrs. S. W. Black, Mrs. William E. DeGroot, Mrs. Harriet Minster, Mrs. Edward Renk and Mrs. James Ridge.

A jolly evening was enjoyed by the pleased hostess and her guests.

Expect Large Attendance
At Card Party Tonight

The card party which is scheduled for this evening, sponsored by Mrs. Joseph Duffy, Mrs. Neal Mulligan and Miss Mame Mulligan, to be held in Hibernian Hall, promises to be a success. Pinochle and "500" will be played and many prizes will be awarded to the winners, such as thirty-piece set of dishes, step ladder, garden rake, boudoir lamp, sweater, cigarettes, silk stockings, two georgette scarfs, fancy work, men's silk socks, candy and other valuable gifts.

Table assignments will not be made until 9.15 which will give everybody an opportunity to witness the Hallowe'en parade this evening. The ladies have made every effort to make the party successful and they anticipate a large crowd.

Frolic of Season Enjoyed
At Zion Lutheran Church

That goblins and witches fly about in all kinds of weather was proven Wednesday evening, by the large gathering at the Lutheran Hallowe'en frolic. Many received prizes for various games, among them, in the grand march: Junior, original, Alexandria Davis; junior, fancy, Jack Moss; comic, Doris Vansciver; senior, comic, Robert Hughes; senior, fancy, Margaret Appleton; senior, original, Irene Baines; Dyer's Milk Family, special, Clarence Smith and Carol Foell; the Jones family, Maud Griffice, Doris Sheetz and Elizabeth Daniels.

Screams of laughter and some of fright greeted the descent into the witches' cavern. Credit for the party belongs to Miss Helsel's Sunday School Class, known as the Hope Circle.

Miss Olivia Highland, who is a teacher at Rosemont, passed the week-end with her parents, on Walnut and Cedar streets.

Miss Mary Kelly Is Honored at A Shower

A miscellaneous shower was tendered Miss Mary Kelly, of the Third Ward, at the home of Mrs. Jacob Holman, of Wilson avenue and Jackson street, on Tuesday evening.

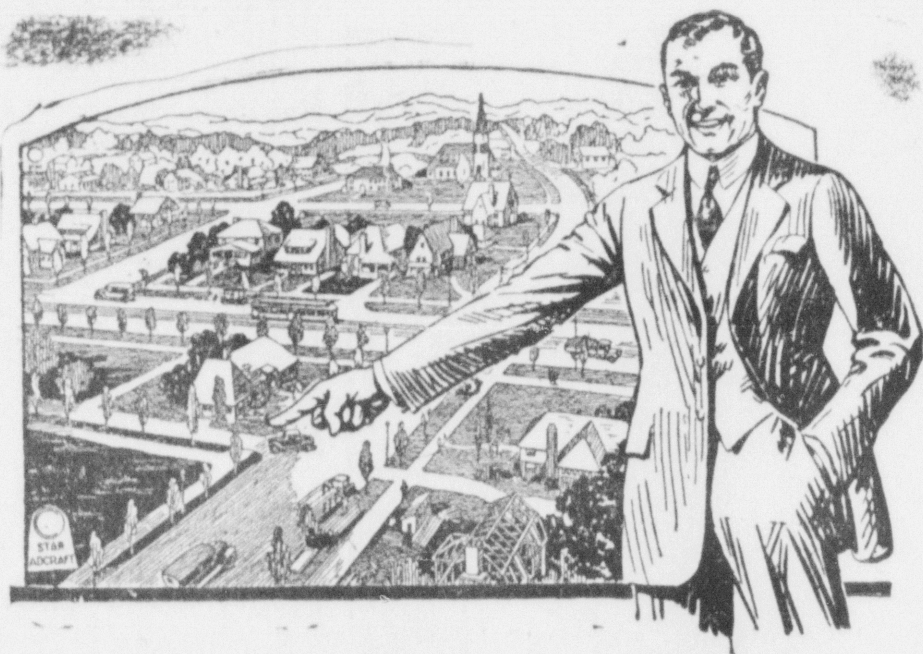

The surprised guest was presented with many beautiful and useful articles.

The guests included: Miss Kelly, Miss Mary Doyle, the Misses Anna, Theresa, Regina, Margaret and Catharine Melvaine, Mrs. M. Keating, Mrs. M. McFadden, Mrs. A. Dixon, the Misses Catharine and Alice Keating, and Mrs. William Armstrong, of Bristol, Mrs. Alfred Darrah, of Andalusia, and the Misses Rita, Catharine and Mary Keating, of Langhorne.

Following the shower progressive "500" was played and prizes were given the Misses Theresa and Catharine Melvaine.

COMMITTEE TO MEET

A meeting of the committee which will serve a supper in connection with the forthcoming bazaar at St. James' Church, will take place in the parish building Monday evening, November 4th.
